Published on: October 28, 2008

Turks & Caicos will be showcasing its restaurants and a few properties during the second annual Turks & Caicos Gourmet Safari, taking place Dec. 19 to 20. A line-up of top chefs and properties will participate in the second annual Turks & Caicos Gourmet Safari, on the island of Providenciales (Provo). Wayne Garland, executive chairman of the Turks & Caicos Tourist Board, said, "The Gourmet Safari will be a phenomenal display of local Turks & Caicos cuisine and culture against the backdrop of famed Grace Bay Beach. We are pleased to unite distinguished executive and celebrated Belonger (native) chefs, who together will create exquisite island dishes sure to impress even the most discerning palates."

Making its debut in February 2009, The Estate at Grace Bay Club -- a new collection of 22 custom-designed ultra-elegant suites -- will be one of the islands' featured attractions on display during the occasion. Evening festivities will begin with an opening reception at Grace Bay Club's Infiniti Bar, a luxury all-suite property perched on 11 acres of Grace Bay Beach, followed by a first course at Coyaba, a gazebo-style restaurant offering contemporary Caribbean cuisine; a second course at The Somerset on Grace Bay's O'Soleil, where Executive Chef Stephen McGarrie displays his Caribbean roots and then concluding with dessert and cigars at The Restaurant at Amanyara, offering a selection of Asian and Mediterranean fare along with an extensive array of premium cigars. The Turks & Caicos Gourmet Safari will take place Dec. 19 to 20, 2008 from 6:30 p.m. to 12:30 a.m. Space is limited to an intimate group with costs per couple starting at $500. Dress is island elegant. For more information, call 800-241-0824 or visit www.tcigourmetsafari.com or www.turksandcaicostourism.com.
